Tonight, Roger Johnson and Fred Brooks will be giving a presentation on RV safety and the importance of RV weights in regards to tire inflation. Roger has set up an individual tire weigh in at the Shrine Center on April 16 & 17, 2016. We are looking into an overnight stay on the 15th at the Shrine Center and possible dinner.

Anytime RV's are parked in the Shrine Center Parking lot jack pads must be placed under the jacks.

A recommendation was made that guest would only be allowed on a rally after the deposit due date has past.

COACH WEIGH-IN

With the upcoming Tucson Drifters coach weigh-in taking place April 16-17, Larry Coplin passed along the following opinion article he came across in a newsletter called the RV Daily Report.

OPINION: Overweight RVs are an industry issue

- There has been a lot of discussion in recent years about overweight RVs. Most of the talk centers around RVers cramming too much stuff in their units and exceeding the vehicle's weight rating.
- Groups like Escapees Club and FMCA offer the opportunity to have RVs weighed at many events, and most who do have their RVs weighed are surprised at the results.
- But, overweight RVs are not entirely the consumers fault. The RV industry shares much of the blame. I recall reading a blog a year or two ago where the writer noted their motorhome was designed to carry everything but people.
- I can't put my finger on the post now, but the bottom line was that after weight for fuel, LP gas and fresh water was added into the mix, the family had just 400 pounds available for clothes, dishes — and people.
- A few weeks ago, I was approached by Kimberly Travaglino, who is the founder of the nearly 1,150-member Fulltime Families group. She was very concerned about her Heartland fifth wheel after learning some interesting information about the unit.
- The fifth wheel is officially rated to hold 18,000 pounds, according to the labels affixed to her RV. However, she has since discovered:
- Each of her three axles are rated for just 5,200 pounds — for a total weight carrying capacity of 15,600 pounds.

- Furthermore, the leaf springs on her toy hauler are rated to carry just 12,000 pounds.
- She was rightfully concerned that even if her family was diligent to keep the weight of the entire fifth wheel to just 18,000 pounds — the maximum weight rating — her family was exerting more pressure on the axles and springs than they were designed to bear.
- She asked what, if anything, could be done to shore up the structure. I immediately recommended MORryde because their staff has told me in the past they were the experts in RV suspensions, and their website boasts of that claim as well:
- "At MORryde, we think of your RV as a house on wheels — one that needs a solid foundation to withstand the rigors of the road. For nearly 50 years, we've been delivering suspensions systems that protect this foundation. Considered the expert in suspension systems, we offer a variety of solutions, for every budget."
- Which is why Kimberly and I are both surprised the company would not even offer the courtesy of a response when we both sought confirmation that MORryde had products to help people in situations like this.
- Assuming that this is a very common problem in the industry, I even offered to do a story in RV Daily Report and Let's RV on how effective the products were in addressing Kimberly's weight issue. Crickets — no response at all.
- While Kimberly and I were in the process of trying to find a solution to her weight issue, the family moved their RV from Cocoa Beach back down to Delray, Fla. They made it exactly one exit down Interstate 95 when her husband, Chris, spotted white smoke billowing out of the driver's side wheel compartment.
- By the time he pulled over, flames were shooting out from the rear wheels, and burning perilously close to the toy hauler's fuel tank.
- Because they had been trained by Mac the Fire Guy to have fire extinguishers at each RV exit and in the tow vehicle, Chris was able to suppress the fire with a whole can of extinguisher foam.
- The vehicle was towed to a service center where the Travaglinos were told the axle bearings had locked up on the driver's side rear tire. They are left to believe that this whole situation was caused because the fifth wheel toy hauler was rated for a certain capacity — which is why they bought it — but built with components that could not bear that much weight.
- Kimberly is, perhaps, one of the RV industry's greatest cheerleaders. Besides her own organization, her Facebook group has nearly 10,000 members. She is responsible for hundreds of people buying new RVs each year, if not for full-time living, then at least so families can experience many of the things her group does on a part-time basis.
- However, she is constantly listening to horror stories from RV owners about defective products they bought. The problem has increased in recent years, she told me. She has been at her current campground for only a few days, and three of her neighbors have complained about product quality. One can point to the RV roof peeling away and exposing lumber on a two-week-old travel trailer.
- "I think the recession forced several high-quality RV manufacturers with commendable reputations out of business because they couldn't compete against companies who build and sell RVs that are, for all intent and purpose, designed to be bought and stored," Kimberly told me.
- If anyone in the industry has a solution to the problem of overrated RV weights, and what can be done to help people who bought these RVs shore up their systems, Kimberly and I would welcome more information. Perhaps an RV dealer has jerry-rigged a solution that could be shared with others?

Speaking of rallies, I am amazed that with 43 coaches in our club, that only 12 to 15 participate in most rallies. Some of the 15 are different folks but many are the same for each rally. I would love to see more rally participation. Remember that the newsletter outlines the upcoming rallies in great detail, and I encourage you to consider taking part in them.

Check out the website for the latest rally pictures and updated brochure.

The activity committee is already working on planning the 2016/2017 rally schedule. You will love what they are planning! Attend the planning meetings and give us your input.

Many of our 10 new members in 2015/2016 have signed up for future rallies. Let's make them feel welcome. I encourage all of you to also be on the lookout for new potential members. Give them a brochure and refer them to the Drifters website. It has lots of information about the club and access to the newsletters. www.tucsondrifters.org

I always welcome your comments and suggestions.

I encourage all of you to consider purchasing a logo'ed Tucson Drifters shirt to wear at Drifters events. We now have an arrangement with Aztec Embroidery and Screen-printing here in Tucson that allows you to order a shirt in men's and women's sizes and styles directly from the vendor. See the newsletter or website for more details.

Don't let that rig stay in the driveway...Let's go places.

FROM THE ANCIENTS TO THE STARS
RAIL-SIDE RV RANCH & CABIN RESORT
 Williams, Arizona
 April 28 - 1 May 2016

What do you know about Northern Arizona other than they get the winter snows and we don't???? Do you know the town of Williams is named for Bob Williams a skinny, redheaded mountain man rumored to have had nine lives and who set the standard for alcohol consumption all across the southwest; why the town chose to hold up construction of I-40; that the original Rte-66 is still the 'main street' of Williams; that the 'Red Garter Bordello' is still in business, although of another kind? Do you know about Bearizona, a preserve for wild animals native to the North American continent (big time photo op)? How about the solar system as viewed from the Lowell Observatory or the singing wait staff at Black Bart's?
